Chad integra infrastructure

What does infrastructure refer to in Chad?
Infrastructure in Chad refers to various facilities and installations,such as roads,electricity,and water systems. The infrastructure in Chad has been lacking,which negatively impacts the daily lives of its citizens. However,many groups are working to help Chad improve its infrastructure.

How can Chad improve its road network?
Expanding the road network has diversified Chad's options in terms of trade routes to neighbouring countries and ports. As in other landlocked countries in Africa, transport costs make up 50 per cent of the value of exports; better roads will help to reduce this economic burden.

How does the National Transport program contribute to Chad's development?
Improving the road network is the main focus of the National Transport Program,and part of strategies for national and regional integration. It was also highlighted as a national priority in the Government of Chad's Poverty Reduction Strategy Program. The project therefore contributes to Chad's development at the strategic level.

Why does Chad have a low adaptive capacity?
Dwellers usually have low adaptive capacity to respond to such events due to high levels of poverty and a lack of risk-reducing infrastructures. In 2012,heavy floods in southern Chad affected up to 700 000 people ,with the most affected regions being Tandjilé,Mayo-Kebbi Est,Mayo-Kebbi Ouest and Sila .
