How are energy prices set in Ireland?
This reality needs to be reflected in how energy markets are run and prices are set in Ireland. Today the market structure for electricity means that when the wind does not blow and gas is used the cost of gas sets the electricity price very high.

Should Ireland have more interconnectors with the rest of Europe?
One option is to provide more interconnections between Ireland and the rest of Europe,including our neighbour Britain. By 2030 Ireland will have five interconnectors to the UK or France. Such interconnectors are expensive. As Ireland and Britain are subject to the same weather patterns,further connection to the rest of Europe is needed.
