Is Syria a'regime is winning' or 'opposition is losing'?
Until recently, the Syria situation was seen in Turkey as "regime is winning, opposition is losing" with the Iran-Russia axis defining the developments on the ground, said Galip Dalay, a senior consulting fellow at Chatham House, a think tank in London. But the recent rebel push has changed that power dynamic.

How will Syria's fall impact key players in the Middle East?
For Russia, Syria's fall could mean losing its closest Middle Eastern ally and undermining its ability to project power while it fights a war in Ukraine. For Iran, it could shatter its so-called Axis of Resistance, comprising allied states and militias. Here's how the events in Syria could impact key players in the Middle East:

Would escalating the war in Syria undermine Iran's diplomacy?
However,escalating the war in Syria could undermineIran's efforts to pursue diplomacy with the West and Arab states. Losing Syria would be "a huge blow" for Iran,Parsi said.

Does Ankara support a rapprochement with Syria?
Ankara has also represented the opposition in negotiations with Russia over several years in the past decade,which eventually led to a ceasefire agreement in 2020 between parties in Syria each of them supports. Despite its support for opposition forces,Turkey has not ruled out a rapprochement with Syria.

Are Syrian rebels advancing south to Homs?
Syrian rebels have made a lightning advance in the north of the country,taking two major cities: Aleppo,the second biggest city,and Hama,a strategically important city that lies on a vital supply route. The rebels are saying they'll advance further south to Homs,just over 100 miles from the Syrian capital of Damascus.

Would losing Syria be a big blow for Iran?
Losing Syria would be "a huge blow" for Iran,Parsi said. "The investment Iranians have made in Syria is very significant,it's an important land bridge to Lebanon,but also the alliance the Iranians have with the Assad regime has lasted across the Islamic Republic's history."
