The photovoltaic solar cells will emit the sunlight and convert the gathered solar energy into power energy, which is then stored in the solar battery. At night, the lamp will switch on automatically then consumes the solar power that is stored in the battery. During the first 5 hours of the night, the light will work at average lumens brightness.

When the solar voltage is over 35V the inverter defaults to solar charging if the mains is switched on and I suspect this then over time results in the batteries not getting fully charged, even if the inverter indicates fully charged. Solar panel specs: 350W; Voc 41.1V; Imp 8,1A; Vmp 37,5V; Isc 9,8A.
